THINK OF ALL your SCHOOLCOULD do WITH $100,000.

U.S. Cellular® is Calling All Communities: vote for your school and help it be one of ten to win $100,000.

We believe educating our kids has never been more of a priority. That's why we're out to support the cause by giving schools money to use toward whatever they feel is important. Big, small, public, private, primary, middle and high schools—they're all eligible.

What you can do is simple. Come into any U.S. Cellular® store from 11/13/09 through 1/15/10 and get a code to use online to vote for your school. The ten schools with the most votes will receive $100,000 each. That's a total of $1,000,000 in support of education.

One of last year's winners, the Brogden Primary School in Dudley, North Carolina, built a much-needed playground with their $100,000, delighting students, parents and teachers.

So what are you waiting for? Show your school spirit by going to U.S. Cellular today and voting. After all, we can't think of a better cause.

Visit uscellular.com to find a store near you, where you can get your voting code.

Let us help you find a location: visit uscellular.com or call 1-888-BUY-USCC

Calling All Communities: No purchase necessary to enter or win. Voting begins November 13, 2009, and ends January 15, 2010. See official rules at uscellular.com/callingallcommunities. ©2009 U.S. Cellular.

Heading Into the Holiday "Dark" Period, Hynes Is in Trouble

February 2 is just around the corner. After this week, there are really only about four

he original hope of Dan Hynes' Democratic gubernatorial campaign was that it could outspend and beat up Pat Quinn on TV by Thanksgiving to the point where the governor was vulnerable in the February 2 primary.

Early benchmark polling for Quinn had him leading Hynes 54-26, with other polls showing similar results. Hynes' name ID was a relatively low 67 percent, compared to Quinn's 88 percent.

Since then, Hvnes has spent close to $2 million on TV ads, but Quinn has matched him pretty much dollar for dollar. And while Hynes stopped running network TV ads on November 11 and went dark on cable last week, Quinn was up with a positive bio ad last week on both network and cable.

The governor has raised more money much faster than many people expected, given his historical aversion to the activity. Ouinn has also run a much better, tighter, and more visible campaign than many had expected. The governor is getting "earned" media coverage on the all-important Chicago TV almost every day, and the state's multi-billion-dollar capital construction bill has allowed him to cut ribbons all over the state, which is something Hynes simply can't match.

Recent polling conducted by other statewide Democratic candidates shows Quinn ahead of Hynes 50-38 and 50-35, sources say.

While clearly demonstrating that the race is significantly tightening, the polling shows Quinn has not yet been brought below 50 percent – a crucial benchmark for all incumbents, even though there are more than two candidates in the race at this point. (Both of the secondtier candidates face petition challenges, however, and could be booted from the contest.) At least one of those polls has Quinn with about a two-to-one favorable rating, which shows that Hynes' ads haven't yet succeeded in roughing up the governor.

The Hynes people believe they have significantly closed the gap and are now in a position to make the final fourweek run beginning in January. But big questions remain about what the "dark" period – when nobody is running ads between now and January will do to the polling numbers. Will Hynes fade back to the status-quo ante? Or will his numbers roughly hold steady while voters' attentions turn to decidedly unpolitical things? There are reports from inside that Hynes plans to run a Christmas ad in December, but that will be a purely positive message and won't do much to bring Quinn down.

Because Hynes hasn't yet fully put the governor on his back, there are those who believe that the comptroller's campaign message won't really work in the final four weeks, either. I have said publicly that I believe this race could be over by Thanksgiving if Hynes didn't have Quinn bleeding from every political orifice by the traditional holiday-season kickoff date – after which negative ads would likely be a huge liability. He doesn't appear to have done that to Quinn, but I'm not quite ready to pronounce Hynes' campaign officially dead, although everybody would have to admit that he does face some very, very difficult odds.

Both campaigns have indicated privately that polling and focus grouping show that Governor Quinn's proposed income-tax hike "works" much better against him than attempting to tie Quinn to his ousted predecessor and two-time running mate Rod Blagojevich. Hynes has focused his advertising on the tax issue, but the ads clearly haven't put Quinn down yet. It's not known whether Hynes will attempt to somehow use the Blagojevich issue in his January ad campaign. Quinn has a pretty solid reputation for honesty among voters, and he is probably seen as a "safe" choice considering the last two governors. They also clearly want to see him succeed and have so far given him something of a pass on his many stumbles in office.

That hopeful voter attitude could all fade by next fall, after Quinn has another legislative session under his belt, but February 2 is just around the corner. After this week, there are really only about four campaign weeks left, and every candidate who can afford it will be up on TV come January. There will be a lot of cash flowing, and messages will easily be buried under all the clutter.

Guantanamo-Detainee Plan Stirs Controversy

he issue of housing accused terrorists in the Midwest was at the forefront last week as Thomson Correctional Center, in Illinois just over the Mississippi River from Iowa, is considered as a potential landing spot for Guantanamo Bay detainees after they leave Cuba.

Iowa Republicans spoke out against the possible transfer, while Democrats said they'd be open to the option.

Governor Chet Culver said that the transfer could create much-needed jobs.

The governor said in an interview with reporters that he spoke with U.S. Representative Bruce Braley (D-Waterloo), whose district is just across the river from Thomson, about the issue.

"We both are interested in getting more information out to our citizens, out to our constituents, that will be impacted," Culver said. "But we also understand that during these tough economic times, jobs are critically important. So it's really up to the local leadership, the residents in eastern Iowa there that could benefit from this prison, to weigh in on the decision and decide for themselves whether or not it will be an overall benefit or not."

Culver said the key is to get citizen input. "I've encouraged the federal government to do all they can inform the local residents, especially there in Clinton and Jackson counties, and to weigh the pros and the cons," he said. "I'll be part of that review."

Meanwhile U.S. Representative Tom Latham (R-Ames) announced legislation to block the transfer of Guantanamo Bay detainees to Iowa and 10 other Midwestern states.

"Iowa families deserve the guarantee of the federal government that some of the world's most dangerous terrorists, many of whom helped plan the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, will not be housed or tried just minutes from the neighborhoods where they live and work," Latham said.

Republican Party of Iowa Chair Matt Strawn quickly voiced support for Latham's legislation, while Braley accused Republicans of fear mongering on the

"We already hold 400 international people in our federal prison system," Braley said, "including some who participated in the first bombing attempt of the World Trade Center, those who participated in the bombing of our embassies in Kenya, and some of them are housed in federal prisons right now in Marion. So I don't want to escalate this into a political chess match; that's not what this is about. This is about making sure that the safety and security of Americans is protected."

by Lynn Campbell, IowaPolitics.com

Braley, who toured the facility in Thomson last week, said additional security measures would be taken "to make sure that it was on par with if not more secure than the super-max facility in Florence, Colorado," should the detainees be brought here.

The state Republican Party and U.S. Representative Steve King (R-Kiron) have both pushed for Braley to oppose housing the prisoners in the Thomson Correctional Facility.

"Congressional reaction will be a key factor in whether or not terrorist detainees are moved to the Thomson Correctional Center," King said. "I am asking Bruce Braley to break with the president and Nancy Pelosi and join me to keep the worst of the worst Al-Qaeda terrorists off of U.S. soil."

School Leaders Say Using Reserves Won't Work

Culver faced a crowd of more than 1,000 Iowa school-board members and administrators and explained why he had to cut their budgets by $360 million, but several educators said they don't like his solution of forcing districts to use their cash reserves and said that property taxes will ultimately increase

At the Iowa Association of School Boards annual convention in Des Moines, Culver asked educators to support his legislative proposal that would require certain school districts to spend down a portion of their cash reserves to offset the 10-percent statebudget cut before increasing property taxes. "I'm doing this because I want to do all I can to avoid a tax increase on hard-working Iowans," he said.

Alta school-board member Ila Galvin, whose district has about 500 students, said there's no question that property taxes will increase in her district despite what Culver said.

"I can't agree with him on not having to raise property taxes because I don't see any other solution," she said. "We don't all have the cash reserves he's talking about. Property taxes definitely will have to be increased."

The Line in the Sand Is Drawn. Will You Help Hold It?

he Continental Congress 2009 concluded its 11 days of deliberating on Saturday, November 21. The work product that is emerging, titled "Articles of Freedom," is a testament to a measured, thoughtful, and lawful process that all Americans can be proud of. The more than 100 delegates that convened from 48 states set out to end the violations of the Constitution through which the People's administrative and judicial processes have already been exhausted – i.e., exercising their First Amendment Right to Petition for a Redress of Grievances with no legitimate response from the federal government.

The resultant document, "Articles of Freedom," is the proverbial line in the sand that, if 3 to 5 percent of America embraces it, can restore Constitutional order in America. The "Remedial Instructions to Congress & the States" as well as the suggested "Civic Action" for the people to take to enforce these instructions illustrate that we are in our Republic's 11th hour. If we are to remain a free people, it is time to take action beyond two-party elections, beyond unheard petitioning, and beyond rallies and marches. Those efforts have not worked.

On whichever side of the mediamanipulated left/right paradigm you find yourself, it is undeniable that every branch of government and every major political party has failed to uphold their oaths of office. The expansion of government programs, massive spending of money we do not have, and unlawful wars are patently unconstitutional and violate their oaths of office. The result is economic ruin, less national security, and an ever-escalating police state. We are over-extended militarily across the globe, and our stature as a nation of innovators has been reduced to that of debtors and mindless consumers. This is not due to the failure of capitalism and free markets. It is due to our own lack of vigilance that allows for the advancement of corporatism under the guise of democracy.

In full disclosure, I have been involved in the organization and implementation of Continental Congress 2009. I am excited about this popular-sovereignty approach to remedying what is wrong in America, as any right that is not enforceable is no right at all. And if we don't stand up and begin to exercise our rights to hold our servant government accountable, then our natural rights, guaranteed by the Bill of Rights, will ultimately atrophy and die. These "Articles of Freedom" are more than a patriotic feelgood declaration. This is the culmination of dozens of years of exhaustive research, and thorough and legal petitioning for a redress of grievances to avail the People of their constitutionally mandated consent of the governed. Silence by our servant government is an admission of guilt. And so it is time to instruct our servants on how to remedy what we have allowed them to ruin.

I have met many people who just don't care about such matters. Their lives are not dramatically impacted enough at this moment for any of this to matter. They are more concerned with who won the game or the latest celebrity scandal. Their thinking is that all the debt and ruination of our country's infrastructure and ability to produce anything of real value is a problem for future generations, not ours. I got involved because I vehemently disagree. It is our responsibility to future generations that we exhaust all possible peaceful remedies to restore America to its constitutional governance that made us the most innovative and prosperous nation on Earth.

We have forgotten that it is our civic duty to ensure our servant government plays by the rules that created our Republic in the first place. It is our own fault we are in the predicament we now face as a nation. The good news is that the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution, if followed, will remedy what ails America.

To that end, I encourage you to review the "Preamble" and "Civic Action" sections of the "Articles of Freedom" that Continental Congress 2009 authored, printed to the right. Watch the Web site ArticlesOfFreedom.us these next few days as the full text of each area of "Violation" and "Instructions to Congress & the States" are posted. Go to CC2009.us/archives to watch videos of the presentations and deliberations of the Delegates. Consider taking the pledge and becoming part of the 3 to 5 percent of Americans that enforce these instructions so that the modern-day revolution of ideas that have served us so well in the past are no longer taken for granted.

In defense of a free people, the time has come to reassert our God-given natural rights and cast off tyranny Let the facts reveal – the Federal

November 21, 2009

Preamble

Government of the United States of America, which was instituted to protect the rights of individual citizens, instead - threatens our life, liberty, and property through usurpations of the Constitution; and emboldened by our own lack of responsibility and due diligence in these matters, has exceeded its mandate, and abandoned those founding principles which have made our nation exceptional;

Our servant government has undertaken these unconstitutional actions in direct violation of their enumerated duties, to the detriment of the People's liberty and the sovereignty of our Republic;

Over many years and spanning multiple political administrations, the People who have, in good conscience, attempted to deliberate our grievances and voice our dissent against these offensive actions through both petition and assembly, have been maligned and ignored with contempt;

The people of the several States of Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin, and Wyoming, justly alarmed at these arbitrary and unconstitutional actions, have elected, constituted, and appointed delegates to meet, and sit in general Congress in the city of St. Charles, Illinois.

by Todd McGreevy

Whereupon these delegates, as duly elected representatives of the several States, have gathered in defense of divine justice, liberty, and the principles of limited government, and we stand in clear recognition of the supreme law of the land - the Constitution of the United States of America

Therefore, We demand that Government immediately re-establish Constitutional rule of law, lest the People be forced to do so themselves; and we hereby serve notice that in the defense of Freedom and Liberty there shall be NO COMPROMISE to which we shall ever vield.

Civic Action

Articles of Freedom of Continental Congress 2009

Delegates to Continental Congress 2009 and others from each of the several States shall serve this document titled, "Articles of Freedom," with its Remedial Instructions, on each United States Senator and Representative in their offices located in their respective States, placing them on notice that We the free People of America believe them to be in violation of their Oath of Office and the Constitution for the United States of America.

When a goodly number of millions of American people agree, we will therefore withdraw our financial support from the federal government, in a lawful and constitutional manner, and implement other responsible civic actions until all violations of the Constitution for the United States of America CEASE.

Los Coscorrones, November 28 at Bent River Brewing Company

he Quad Cities band Los Coscorrones sounds like it finds its groove so effortlessly that it's easy to fall into the Santana vibe and explore no further.

But the quintet – which will be celebrating the release of its self titled debut on Saturday at Bent River - is deceptive, couching some thrilling instrumental interplay in party songs that repel analysis with rote lyrics, gangvocal refrains, and most critically irresistible hooks. In that way, the band crafts smart music disguised as something lesser, and it's never so smart that it's no longer fun.

Santana is the obvious source of the rhythms and many of the guitar leads by John Nache – "We're all huge fans [of Santana]. That's a really big inspiration," said drummer Max Tapia – but there's a clear heavy-metal influence, too, with a progressive bent. That's not much of a surprise, given that bassist Carlos Terronez and guitarist/lead singer Tom Vretis came from metal bands.

On the instrumental break of opening track "Banana Mango," a solid, straightforward guitar solo is followed by two guitars dueling over a throbbing bass, prog-rock-like, for nearly 30 seconds, and that leads to a lovely keys- and bass-led interlude that segues into more twin-guitar fireworks, but slightly softer this time

On "Case Fiesta," the final intertwined guitar solos come straight from metal school, both in terms of speed and the use of a two-guitar attack. "Just Jose" draws heavily from the guitar harmonies of metal bands such as Metallica. It might be missing the dynamic range and an epic scope, but it plays like "Orion" with Latin rhythms and percussion. And "Orale Ese" even throws 8 some hard-edged rockabilly into the mix.

"We touch base on a lot of different things," Tapia said, and it's a cliché that in this case is true. Although it's not on the record, Tapia said there's a hip-hop element that's recently been added to the band.

Recorded and co-produced by Ray Malone at Sound & Vision Records, Los Coscorrones is clear and well-defined, the compositions are tight, and there's a welcome attention to detail. On a lengthy workout between Tapia and percussionist Segio Mendoza on album closer "Maria Juanita," a bass rumble is barely perceptible, more felt than heard

Yet that type of subtlety can often be lost if you're not paying attention. Throughout the album, catchiness obscures complexity - an admirable thing. The loose group vocals on many choruses and occasionally sloppy playing are charming and make the recording feel nore casual than it actually is. But the words undermine those accomplishments;

they sound like placeholders and are the least interesting thing about the record.

The lyrics have a companion problem in the songwriting: As structures for jamming, they're fantastic and efficient, but there's not much to many of them beyond that. Three of the eight songs here have by-the-numbers openings, a deficiency that's highlighted by the introductions to the other tracks such as the piercing guitars of "Just Jose" and the four-note keyboard cheese of "La Muerta Es Mi Amor." When something is as consistently invigorating as this record, the weak spots stand out a little bit more.

But what's plainly evident from its debut is that Los Coscorrones have abundant musical talent and, when the band is on, it hits a rare twofer:

simultaneously accessible and challenging. If it works some on its songcraft, this band could become lethal.

Los Coscorrones will play a CD-release show on Saturday, November 28, at Bent River Brewing Company (1413 Fifth Avenue in Moline). The bill includes E-Sho, music starts at 10 p.m., and cover is $4.

For more information on the band, visit MySpace.com/loscoscorrones. The group's CD will be available at shows and at Mixtapes (830 15th Avenue in East Moline)

Comedies and Dramas November through February

non't let that elf's sour mug fool you – actor Mark D. Lingenfelter is actually thrilled to be taking part in our area's winter-theatre season. (Uh ... you are, aren't you, Mark?) The performer will reprise his role as David Sedaris' doppelgänger in the Harrison Hilltop Theatre's remount of The Santaland Diaries, opening December 16, and the show is just one of a dozen comedic and dramatic gifts in store for audiences this winter. (Two of them, in fact, are productions from organizations more frequently associated with summer theatre; the Clinton Area Showboat Theatre stages Barbara Robinson's beloved The Best Christmas Pageant Ever, opening November 27, and the Timber Lake Playhouse presents the holiday comedy The Santa Class on December 5 and 6.) The Harrison Hilltop will also deliver poignant monologues in Birth (December 10 through 13), and Edward Albee's dramatic comedy Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? (opening January 28). Less corrosive fare can be found in Davenport's Junior Theatre's student-actor takes on Scrooge! (opening December 12) and Ramona Quimby (opening February 20), with a omantic-comedy option in the Richmond Hill Barn Theatre's Wrong for Each Other (opening February 11). The Playcrafters Barn Theatre delivers a show-biz satire in Moon Over Buffalo (opening January 15); St. Ambrose University offers a Tennessee Williams masterpiece with The Glass Menagerie (February 19 through 21); and New Ground Theatre stages family

THE TWILIGHT SAGA:

Like last November's film version of Stephenie

Meyer's Twilight, this November's follow-up, the elpfully titled The Twilight Saga: New Moon, is a elite, malevolent cadre of vampires called the stand in silence – and listen to a tinny. Muzak rendition of grand opera. It's a smart, hysterical cutaway shot of Bella's plane heading to Italy. It in human form, scampering up the side of Bella's house and leaping through her window; a smooth camera move that circles the despondent Bella as utumn turns to winter and winter turns to spring.

But like the film's two best gags, these bits were met attended. What did the audience respond to? Well, ust about everything that Bella's dad (Billy Burke) and high-school pals said, even when it wasn't funny, elicited cackles. Every mild reference to a ruck, Edward's trapped-at-age-17 hottie actually being 107 years old - cracked the crowd up. And when, early on, Lautner took off his shirt to reveal a truly intimidating six-pack, the mostly female audience giggled excitedly for a full 10 seconds

In short, New Moon will probably make a sizable portion of its Twilight-loving target demographic very, very happy, even if those viewers ignore the elements that might make The Rest of Us happy.

Personally, as a middle-aged man who hasn't read

Meyer's books and isn't feeling the loss, I remain inmoved by this unfurling cinematic saga, with good-looking but desperately uninteresting leading characters. (If I want to experience a moody, metaphoric love triangle between a human, a vampire, and a shape-shifter, I'll just watch the

Yet while I'm not crazy about the screen material or its doggedly earnest presentation - or, for that matter, the special effects, which are distractingly weak for a series that's going to reap untold million - I'll readily admit that there's just enough that's good about New Moon to make it a painless sit. Though their screen time is unfortunately diminished in this sequel, there are exceedingly likeable comic turns by Anna

Kendrick and Michae Welch, and Weitz continually comes through with cleverly unforced visuals; a scene of Edward exiting his car and opening Bella's passenger-side door a split second later is a spectacular bit of throwaway amusement. And those late-film sequences in Italy give New Moon a visceral kick that you might be inprepared for even if you have read Meyer's books Not only does the great Michael Sheen show up, elegantly vicious as the Volturi leader, but so does Dakota Fanning, who, in the few minutes that her vampire is around, effectively steals the movie with her fierce, red-eved focus and wicked Mona Lisa smile. The Internet Movie Database reveals that Fanning will return in next year's The Twilight Saga: Eclipse. I might become a fan of this franchise yet.

THE BLIND SIDE

No one could've been less enthused than I at the prospect of The Blind Side, the true – or, more likely, truthy - story of Michael Oher's rise to profootball greatness, and, seemingly, yet another opportunity for Sandra Bullock to strong-arm audiences into finding her plucky and adorable and other adjectives she hasn't been in over a decade. Amazingly, though, this predictable, feel-good weepie actually kinda works. On almost any level you could name, director John Lee Hancock's movie is incredibly easy to tear apart (and don't think mean-spirited jokes weren't running in my head all throughout). But even at its most saccharine and phony, the film exudes a spirited, family-friendly charm that's surprisingly infectious, and Bullock, against all expectation, is better here than she's been in ages: toughminded, quick-witted, and refreshingly free of affectation. It's a proudly cornball, inspiringly big hearted entertainment, and earns bonus points for country singer Tim McGraw as Bullock's contentedly put-upon spouse, who is as dryly hilarious as he is effortless. After meeting Oher's apologetically liberal tutor, McGraw turns to Bullock and deadpans, "Whoever thought we'd have a black son before we knew a Democrat?" A Hollywood movie with a major character who's an endearing, funny Republican? What will they think of next?!

Rats!

Of Mice & Men, at the Harrison Hilltop Theatre through November 29

n the Harrison Hilltop Theatre's current take on John Steinbeck's Of Mice & Men, actor Jim Seward plays the chatty, friendly ranch hand Candy, and at one point tells a story about his boss treating the workers to a gallon of whiskey for Christmas. It's a charming little reminiscence – Candy, in the terrifically ingratiating personage of Seward, giggles with delight at the memory - but it's also one that would probably be quickly forgotten if the scenes that followed didn't keep bringing it to mind.

There were definitely strong moments on opening night - the introductory sequence between the gruffly tolerant George (Steve Quartell) and the gentle giant Lennie (Matt Mercer) was especially well done – and a few strong pieces of acting on display. Yet like many a drunkard, Of Mice & Men more often lurched and stumbled, and only rarely maintained any sort of stable rhythm. If you're a fan of the material (and is there anyone who isn't?), director Wayne Hess' production is easy enough to sit through. But Thursday's awkward presentation and overall lack of confidence kept you from being emotionally invested, and the performances were all over the map; the show may have coasted along on goodwill, yet goodwill can only take you so far.

At least it all looks impressive. Designer Chris Walljasper's set – a scrappy, rustic playing area fashioned out of planks of wood - handily (and marvelously) suggests a Depression-era bunkhouse and barn, Peggy Freeman's costumes have a mangy authenticity, and Tristan Tapscott's lighting effects frequently provide their own melancholic air; all told, it's maybe the most visually arresting Harrison Hilltop offering I've yet attended. And when Quartell and Mercer engage in Steinbeck's opening, endearing conversation about beans and rabbits and "the fatta the lan," the performers' relaxed byplay and sweet-natured banter promise an earnest, thoughtful re-telling of this literary classic - exactly the Of Mice & Men you're hoping for.

Yet your first hint that the show may not wind up as sincere as you want it to be actually comes before it even starts, with a cheeky, pre-recorded plug for the theatre and its upcoming productions delivered - by the two Harrison Hilltop producers - in inappropriately jokey Southern drawls. (The announcement ends with a spirited "Yee-haw!", as if we weren't seeing Of Mice & Men, but rather Oklahoma!) Happily, the beautiful scene that follows allays your doubts for a few minutes, but it's not long before your defenses are up again; once other characters trickle into view, your faith in the proceedings grows more and more strained.

It should be said that Of Mice & Men's participants were faced with an unfortunate, unforeseen obstacle during production week, as the show lost the actor playing the ranch hand Crooks mere days before its first performance. (The character was consequently excised from the script, and if you're acquainted with Steinbeck's tale, you might be surprised by how you barely register Crooks' absence.) Yet this last-minute challenge still can't account for a number of performers appearing so under-prepared. Several, in truth, seemed so uncertain about their character intent, and read their lines with so little (or, in actor Chuck McDoniel's case, such strange) dramatic conviction, that you were completely distracted from the story, and from those who actually were wholly engaged on-stage. It frequently felt like we weren't watching an Of Mice & Men performance on Thursday so much as Of Mice & Men auditions.

But even the show's most focused cast members were sometimes left floundering with characterizations that didn't jibe with Steinbeck's material. The wonderfully amusing Seward emerged unscathed, and Mercer, staying in slowwitted character, imbued Lennie with a hushed, delicate poignancy. Yet despite his excellent introductory scene and many first-rate moments - particularly his beaming joy when making plans for a ranch of his own - Quartell's George was too often condescending and flip, with his early intimidation of the boss' son (James Bleecker's Curley) a true head-scratcher: Was this George trying to get fired? And while the actor exuded unforced charisma, Bleecker was barely allowed to suggest Curley's volatility or hatefulness, due mostly to the others' too-easy dismissal of the character. There was no sense of danger when Curley was around – just as there wasn't when Jessica Merritt, as Curley's wife, made mild attempts at sexual advances - and an Of Mice & Men with no threat is no Of Mice & Men at all.

Steinbeck's tale is so inherently touching that you really, really want to like the Harrison Hilltop's latest, and Thursday's audience was clearly ready to enjoy a moving night of theatre. (Nearly all of Lennie's early dialogue was met with goodnatured, appreciative chuckles.) But you could feel the crowd's collective enthusiasm begin to dissipate from scene to scene, and at Of Mice & Men's climax, it became sadly clear that you were no longer feeling much of anything; by the time Lennie was spotlighted in what should've been a heartbreaking closing tableau, I'd doubt there was a wet eye in the house.

Ouad-Cities Waterfront Convention Center Friday, November 27, 7:30 p.m.

D are Earth, the rockers who achieved national fame with Ktheir hit singles "Get Ready" and "I Just Want to Celebrate," will appear at the Quad-Cities Waterfront Convention Center on November 27, and it's fairly easy to see how the group might be considered "old school." "Get Ready," after all, hit number four on the Billboard Hot 100 chart in 1970, and "I Just Want to Celebrate" peaked at number seven in 1971.

But while the band's biggest professional successes came during its early days, with one platinum and two doubleplatinum albums released over a three-year span, it's not like Rare Earth's members have comfortably settled into rocking chairs. As musicians Gil Bridges, Randy "Bird" Burghdoff, Ray Monette, Mike Bruner, and Floyd Stokes Jr. continue to amass

related anxiety in its Joy of Life Weekend Retreat, led by internationally renowned yoga instructor Kambiz Naficy gigs in North America and Europe (Rare Earth has thus far performed more than 3,000 concerts worldwide), new generations of fans continue to be influenced by the group's high-energy sound, among them plenty of fans in the entertainment industry. Over the past 10 years alone, snippets from Rare Earth recordings have been used as samples by artists as diverse as Beck, Black Sheep, Scarface, and Ghostface Killah. The group's songs have been heard in Six Feet Under, Entourage, and throughout the George Clooney movie Three Kings. "I Just Want to Celebrate" was employed in national commercials for AT&T and the Ford Motor Company.

Besides, the group first came to prominence in 1968 – the same year I was born! So if Rare Earth is considered "old school," that means I am, too, and ... um ... as we all know. I'm ... er ... uh ... . Shut up Tickets to Rare Earth's Friday-night concert are $30 for general admission and $20 for IsleOne members, and can be reserved by calling (800)843-4753 or visiting Bettendorf. IsleOfCapriCasinos.com.

According to Satva Center Reiki practitioner Julie Skoff, Kriya Yoga allows her to feel "more energetic and at the same time relaxed" - and who doesn't need to feel more of both at this time of year?

In addition to the retreat's yoga and meditation sessions, time will be allotted for fellowship with other attendees, personal reflection and journaling, and even one-on-one sessions with Naficy, who will share his philosophies on maintaining what he calls one's individual "life-engine." As Naficy himself says, "A person who does not want to manage stress or find inner peace is like a driver who does not stop at the gas station." And I've just figured out what I'm getting my dad for Christmas.

The Joy of Life retreat's four individual sessions will occur from 6 to 9 p.m. on Friday, from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 3:30 to 7:30 p.m. on Saturday, and from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. on Sunday, and reservations can be made by calling (563)209-7167 or visiting SatvaCenter.com.

Music

The Quad City Symphony Orchestra's Masterworks III Adler Theatre and Augustana College Saturday, December 5, and Sunday, December 6

The Quad City Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of conductor Mark Russell Smith, is set to debut the third of its season's six Masterworks concerts. And while the presentations will no doubt be exhilarating, I'll be honest: I'm feeling a bit intimidated just writing about them.

Composed of two classical pieces of roughly 45 minutes each, Masterworks III opens with a performance of Antonin Dvořák's "Cello Concerto," featuring the symphony's principal cellist, Hannah Holman (pictured). Dvořák's musical achievement would certainly be impressive enough - upon hearing the piece, Johannes Brahms reportedly asked, "Why on Earth didn't I know that one could write a cello concerto like this?" – but Holman's credentials are pretty staggering in themselves, as she's also played for the English String Orchestra under Yehudi Menuhin, and the City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra under Simon Rattle.

The program's second half. meanwhile, is the symphony's presentation of Russian composer Dimitri Shostakovich's legendary "Symphony No. 5 in D Minor." Not only was the 1937 composition an extraordinary critical smash upon its opening - piano master Heinrich Neuhaus called it "deep, meaningful, gripping music, classical in the integrity of its conception, perfect in form" - but according to the Quad City Symphony Web site, its premiere "elicited open weeping and a 40-minute ovation."

Taken together, Masterworks III should make for an unforgettable live-music experience, but if that Web quote is correct, you're probably advised to have some tissues on hand. And quite possibly some blister cream

Masterworks III will be performed at Davenport's Adler Theatre at 8 p.m. on December 5 and at Augustana College's Centennial Hall at 2 p.m. on December 6; for tickets and information, call (563)322-0931 or visit QCSymphony.com.

You've likely seen those performers in previous Guild endeavors, and more of the organization's gifted regulars can be found at this year's "Christmas at the Figge" presentations. The art museum's annual madrigal dinners will find the Quad City Singers harmonizing to all genres of holiday choral music while guests dine on a sumptuous meal, and among the familiar singers are such noted Guild veterans as Nathan Bates, Sheri Hess, J. November through February

There will be numerous winter musicals for area audiences to choose from over the next several months, but let's be clear:

Frosty's Magic Hat (opening November 27). Yes, Quad City Music Guild will premiere a festive new version of Babes in Toyland (December 3 through 6). And yes, Davenport's Capitol Theatre will present the debut of Marvin & Karen Roebuck's Gold, Frankincense, & Myrrh (December 5 and 6). But that doesn't mean ... . Wait, what was I saying? Oh yeah, there are also plenty of non-seasonal musicals ontap between December and February. St. Ambrose University, for instance, will stage the joyous family entertainment A Year with Frog & Toad (December 5 and 6), while Augustana College presents the Tony Award-winning children's-book adaptation The Secret Garden (opening January 29). Iowa City's Englert Theatre hosts a group of singing Church Basement Ladies (January 16 and 17), and Davenport's Harrison Hilltop Theatre presents workshop performances of the debuting rock musical Tired American Dream (opening February 25). Circa '21 delivers the return of the everpopular Joseph & the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat (opening January 13), while

Davenport's Adler Theatre brings in touring productions of the musical farce The Drowsy

Chaperone (January 18) and The Wizard of Oz (November 29). Plus, another rendition of that classic tale will be offered when The Center for Living, on December 5, presents

.. er ... A Christmas Wizard of Oz. Hey,

I didn't say there weren't a lot of holiday musicals this winter .... - Mike Schulz

Dinner Playhouse is currently presenting a revue titled Holly Jolly Christmas, and is set to unveil a The Drowsy family presentation Chaperone for the holidays, in

with the Quad Cities Celebrities on December 4 – participants include the reigning Miss Iowa, Anne Michael Langguth, and Figge Art Museum Executive Director Sean O'Harrow - and Ballet Quad Cities' staging of exhilarating romantic encounters in February 13's and 14's Love Stories. Between those balletic bookends. you'll be treated to Hancher Auditorium's taptastic Gregory Hines tribute Thank You, Gregory (at Iowa City High School on January 23), and the exuberant modern stylings of Thodos Dance Chicago (at St. Ambrose University's Galvin Fine Arts Center on January 30), appearing locally as Quad City Arts Visiting Artists. And if you're one of those who enjoys a little Tchaikovsky with your dance, boy oh boy, are you in luck this winter! Not only will the Nolte Academy of Dance perform The Nutcracker at the Englert Theatre December 4 through 6, but both Ballet Quad Cities and RiverPointBallet will deliver their own renditions of this holiday classic, with the former's being staged at the Adler Theatre, and the latter's at the First Presbyterian Church of Davenport and Jumer's Casino & Resort. And get this - both Nutcracker productions are taking place on the same weekend of December 12 and 13! It's gonna be like the Sharks and the Jets! With ballet slippers! (Which, now that I think about it, is kinda redundant.) - Mike Schulz

Call of Duty: Modern Warfare 2: War Is an Addiction

fter another trip to World War II last year for the annual Call of Duty series, Infinity Ward has finally released the sequel to its monster hit Modern Warfare, and it has already gone beyond anyone's expectations. In the first 24 hours the game was available, more than 4.7

million copies were sold, generating $310 million in revenue, Activision reported. That made Call of Duty: Modern Warfare 2 the biggest entertainment launch in history, with higher day-one receipts than The Dark Knight movie or the final Harry Potter book. The buzz around Modern Warfare 2 is outrageous, but it's well deserved.

The story picks up five years after the events of Modern Warfare. The death of the Ultranationalist leader Irman Zakhaev has turned him into a martyr, and his party has taken control of Russia. Vladimir Makarov, his former lieutenant, continues to target Europe and the United States with terrorist attacks. Specialized, multinational units of soldiers form the military group Task Force 141 and focus their efforts on finding Makarov and bringing him to justice.

The same thrill-ride style of storytelling returns and is amplified with even more pulsepounding moments, ranging from jumping a ravine with a snowmobile to nuclear missiles being launched. The first-person perspective plunges you into the action with touches such as your vision being blurred or obscured from flash-bang grenades or blood while the controller mimics a racing pulse. The effect is done so well that I found myself breathing heavily with a mixture of tension and panic. Jumping for a chopper and realizing at the last second that you aren't meant to make the leap leaves you running for life, unarmed, against dozens of militants, with a genuine sense of urgency.

It's a perfect way to tell the story, and unlike other games that offer third-personperspective cut scenes, you only get what your soldier sees and hears. Unfortunately, the story only runs six to eight hours depending on the difficulty setting.

Gameplay is almost identical to previous Call of Duty titles, with the smooth movement and shooting style that no other game has been able to replicate. The majority of your time is spent shooting it out with enemies. Holding the left trigger gives you an accurate aim down the barrel of your gun as opposed to firing from the hip, and provides a quick-lock function that allows you to snap onto your enemies with a click. It's probably the most unrealistic part of the game, but with enemy numbers so large, it's the only way you'll be able to handle them without being superhuman.

Spec Ops is a new cooperative mode with specialized missions that can be played alone or with a friend. The missions, each with three difficulty options, range from running through an obstacle course to going through an enemy compound with a friend covering you from an AC-130 gunship.

Online play is the biggest selling point for many players. The first Modern Warfare introduced a pair of features that set the bar for online multiplayer for the past two years: an experience system in which players build up points to access better weapons, and a rewards system in which players who meet certain accomplishments (multiple kills, ending someone else's kill streak) will be given bonuses. Modern Warfare was the first online shooter to utilize these features, with similar games jumping on this bandwagon afterward. These Call of Duty systems have been improved with new gameplay styles and rewards.

On top of these are several new modes for team-based play with traditional games such as Capture the Flag and King of the Hill, and new games in which one team tries to set bombs while the other team tries to defuse them. It's a solid improvement from the previous multiplayer, and considering that every other online shooter struggled to keep up with Modern Warfare, the sequel has made the hill an even steeper climb.

Modern Warfare 2 has all the ingredients to make a game beyond successful when it comes to both sales and play. It packs in an epic story that truly immerses players. It plays smart and intuitively, with little experience needed to pick up and play well. Online and cooperative play deliver revamped experiences to keep fans coming back for months, maybe even years, to come. If there is any game worth playing this holiday season, it's Modern Warfare 2.

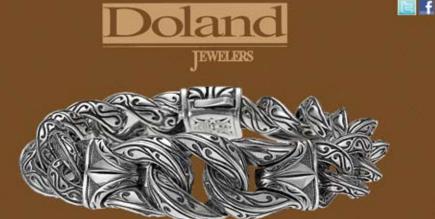

Call of Duty: Modern Warfare 2 is now available for $59.95 on Xbox 360, PlayStation 3, and PC. For this review, the author completed the campaign on "veteran" difficulty, played several Spec Ops scenarios, and played multiple matches online

At a recent dinner, the hostess' cousin rudely spent most of the evening thumbing through his BlackBerry. Upon returning home, received an e-mail from an acquaintance: "How was dinner at Elaine's?" When I asked how he knew I was there, he said Elaine's cousin had Twittered my presence. (I'm known for my business accomplishments, but I'm a private person, and felt violated.) Days later, I dined with an old business colleague, and got Twittered again. I came home to four forwarded e-mails he'd received from our former colleagues, one of whom invented from whole cloth an anecdote painting us as great friends. (He'd actually tried to get me fired.) Again, I felt my privacy had been violated. What are the rules here, for the Twitterer and their unwitting victim?

If you're a movie star, spare us the whine that you can't make tens of millions of dollars on a movie and also pick up a quart of milk without having 100 lenses trained on you to see whether you go for skim or two-percent. But as an ordinary (or relatively ordinary) citizen at a Twenty-five years ago, when I was 18, I had a several-month affair with an older married woman, ending when I met my wife. The woman's still with her husband, who still hates me. My wife knows nothing about the affair, but we live in a small town and are starting to run into these two at parties. Should I reveal any of this to our mutual friends? It would make things less awkward when we're all ogether.

FREE WILL ASTROLOGY by Rob Brezsny

ARIES (March 21-April 19): One of the greatest superpowers a human being can have is the ability to change herself in accordance with her intentions. Let's say you're tired of feeling shame about something there's no good reason to feel shame about, and you decide to do whatever it takes to dissolve that shame, and you succeed in doing it. Or let's say you no longer want to attract bad listeners and flaky collaborators into your life, and you resolve to transform that pattern, and you ultimately achieve your goal. These are acts of high magic, as amazingly wizardly as anything a shaman does. It so happens, Aries, that this superpower is especially accessible to you right now.

splendor and the rot are all mixed up. The line between your strengths and liabilities are hair thin. But have no fear. One of your dormant talents will activate in the nick of time. Your wild guesses will shed bright light whenever the darkness creeps in. And you'll have even more emotional intelligence than usual. P.S. If your psyche tingles like a funny bone that has been tapped, it means that unanticipated help or useful information will arrive within 12 hours.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): "The more you do what you want," says Santa Fe artist Erika Wanenmacher, "the more magic happens." And what she wants, in part, is to be surprised by how life's random events ask to be included in her creative process. During her long walks along the irrigation ditch near her home, for example, odds and ends on the ground call to her, suggesting that she use them in her art pieces heart-shaped rocks, miniature liquor bottles, bent spoons, parts of toys. One of her gallery pieces, "Spell Wall," consists of amulets made from this found stuff. "I'll make whatever I want," Erika says. "Out of whatever I want. About whatever I want." She's your role model, Gemini. Borrow from her perspective. Go in quest of unexpected clues that make you feel oose and free and fertile.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): O O Needing a creative disruption in my routine, I hiked into a forest I'd never visited. The late afternoon light was wan and the wind was chilly. In places, the trail narrowed to a scruffy rut barely big enough for me to walk on, leading me to wonder if I was reading my map wrong. Three times this happened, but always the wider path resumed. Were there bobcats here? When I spied a flash of fur in the distance, I wished I'd researched that subject before I'd come. Still I pressed on. Then I came upon a single segment of a wooden fence, inexplicable in this remote area. One end of its upper slat had come loose and fallen. Moved by a whimsical urge to insert order into the midst of my disorientation, I fixed the slat. My mood brightened, my anxiety dissipated, and the rest of my hike was filled with small epiphanies. Everything I just described, my fellow Cancerian, is an apt metaphor for your week ahead.

LEO (July 23-August 22): I believe that in the coming weeks you'll enjoy 00 experiences that have an emotional resemblance to those referred to in this passage by French novelist Gustave Flaubert: "I want to cover you with love, with caresses, with ecstasy. I want to gorge you with all the joys of the flesh... I want you to be astonished by me, to confess to yourself that you had never even dreamed of such transports... When you are old, I want you to recall those few hours. I want your dry bones to quiver with joy when you think of them." Please note, Leo, that I'm not necessarily saying the pleasures you gather in will stem from an engagement with an actual lover. They might. But your delight may also have a more mysterious origin.

VIRGO (August 23-September 22): It's not just our era that has a tormented relationship with time. Many cultures have been frustrated by its tyranny. During France's July Revolution in 1830, for instance, rebels shot guns at public clocks. While I think that's too extreme for you, I do recommend that you perform a ritual to empower yourself as you wrestle with the passage of the hours and days and weeks. How about smashing a cheap alarm clock with a hammer? Or spending an entire day without ever referring to a timepiece? Or taking ten deep breaths as you imagine you're inhaling eternity and exhaling the grinding tick-tock? It's a perfect moment to claim more freedom from temporality.

LIBRA (September 23-October 22): I agree with football coach Lou Holtz, who said, "The problem with having a sense of humor is often that people you use it on aren't in a very good mood." It's possible to work around this difficulty, however. What you have to do, before you unleash your levity, is conjure up empathy for the sourpuss in question. You should also make sure that your intention is not to mock or poke at the person, but instead offer a potential escape from his or her locked energy. By my calculations, you could be an expert at this kind of psychic judo right now. For best results, practice on yourself. Whenever you're headed toward a negative thought or emotion, nudge yourself away with a jest or wisecrack.

SCORPIO (October 23-November 21): Do you know what you're really worth? Not as measured by your bank account and luxurious possessions. Not as reflected by your boss's or parents' or enemies' images of you. Not as distorted by what you wish vou were worth or fear you're not worth. I'm talking about taking an illusion-free inventory of the skills you have that are fulfilling to you and useful to others. I'm talking about your wisdom more than your knowledge, your self-love more than your popularity, your ability to be good more than to look good.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21): The surest way to beat the system, my dear, is to elude it and erect your own system. The strategy most likely to leave your competitors babbling in the mirror, sweetheart, is to go completely over their heads. That doesn't mean, darling, that you should be a remote and grandiose narcissist who listens to no one but yourself. Smile sweetly as you describe why your way is the best way, you gorgeous genius. Enlist worthy collaborators through the irresistible force of your guileless charisma.

CAPRICORN (December 22-January 19): "A neurosis is a secret that you don't know you are keeping," wrote theater critic Kenneth Tynan. Your assignment is to uncover one of those secrets in yourself. It may not result in an instantaneous cure of your minor personality glitch, but it will be a potent first step that will set in motion a series of healing events. Be brave, Capricorn. I guarantee that any ugliness you might find lodged deep inside you will be entangled with surprising beauty.

AQUARIUS (January 20-February 18): Seventy percent of the world's fresh water is locked away in Antarctica's ice, which is 7,000 feet thick. Let's hope it remains that way for the foreseeable future. If global warming melted that giant slab even a little, sea levels all over the planet would rise and coastal lands would be inundated. As for your frozen areas, however: I'd really like to see at least 30 percent of them thaw. Would you consider doing whatever it takes to release a mini-flood of summery feelings?

PISCES (February 19-March 20): While walking in an unfamiliar neighborhood, I saw a huge red wooden chair on someone's front lawn. It was big enough for a 20-foot-tall giant. An equally oversized martini glass was perched on the arm of the chair. Nearby was a sign that read, "I have flying monkeys at my command, and I'm not afraid to use them." I assumed this scene was the handiwork of an adorable crazy person who's an admirer of The Wizard of Oz mythology. I also flashed on how I could totally see you sitting in that chair. Metaphorically speaking, you too have flying monkeys at your command. I just hope you use them to accomplish good deeds, not evil ones.
